

CLT 301 Chinese Literature: Tradition, Transformation, and Modernity

Course Description:

This course provides a comprehensive overview of Chinese literature from its origins to contemporary works. It examines the historical, cultural, and philosophical contexts of Chinese literary traditions, exploring genres such as poetry, prose, drama, and fiction. The course also investigates the transformation of Chinese literature under modern influences, including interactions with global literary movements and its role in contemporary Chinese identity.

Credit: 4

East China Normal University

can contact our Advisor for more information.