

Study on the Basic Problems of Modern Chinese History

The International Graduate Program in Comparative Modernization (GCM, major of Study on the Basic Problems of Modern Chinese History) resides within the School of Marxism in East China Normal University. The School of Marxism in ECNU has strong academic traditions and has accumulated invaluable expertise and experiences. Renowned for its excellence and leading role in social science research and education, School of Marxism has achieved A class in the fourth round of national subject assessment. Many of its graduates have become senior scholars and practical leaders. Most of the faculty has been awarded National Science Fund, has undertaken state-level and provincial-level academic projects, published numerous academic books, monographs and journal articles, and achieved various research prizes. In 2015, the International Communication Center for the Achievements of Marxism's Sinicization was established, consisting of experts in their corresponding fields, including philosophy, history, politics, economy, law and education. The teaching staff has a multidisciplinary background, including political science, philosophy, history, economics, law and other disciplines. Most of the prospective instructors have more than one year of overseas study or work experience. They have built a solid professional foundation and a broad international perspective, and can communicate with international students smoothly and offer all-English courses. More than 10 teachers of the School faculty have joined the program, including Gu Hongliang, Gong Yongmei, Xu Ruifang, Yao Xiaona, Chen Rong, Hong Yanni, He Songxu and so on. In addition to the full-time teachers listed in the form, the program also invited some distinguished professors at home and abroad to join. A team of outstanding teachers have agreed to offer courses or hold special lectures.

GCM offers overseas students the opportunity to study modernization and related social science while living in China's largest city, Shanghai. GCM recruits students from all over the world, fostering a unique, multidisciplinary and multinational environment where diverse background would enhance rigorous academic study. It will systematically provide a series of courses mainly for international students to study the concept and practice of modern transformation within the global context. The project will particularly lead international students to better understand the ideas of socialism with Chinese characteristics and the great achievements of reform and opening-up. It is dedicated to the transmission of Chinese voice, to establish the Chinese discourse, to display the achievements of socialism with Chinese characteristics, and cultivate international assistance conducive to China's development.

Campus	Minhang Campus	Degree	Doctor of Law
Length (year)	4 Years	Tuition	45000RMB/Year
Instruction Language	English	Application	IELTS ≥ 6.0 / TOEFL ≥ 80 /

		Language Requirement	Cambridge English ≥ B2
Classes Open to International Students Only		NO
Graduation Requirement	Complete the course study and earn the required credits, publish a specified number of papers, complete field research and pass the thesis defense.

Major Courses

Primarily engaged in scientific research and teaching in university or higher education institutions, research organizations, etc.

After Graduation

Primarily engaged in scientific research and teaching in university or higher education institutions, research organizations, etc.

Scholarship

Chinese Government Scholarship

Shanghai Government Scholarship

Application Contact

Yin Laoshi Email: yyin@ied.ecnu.edu.cn